Let's Start!

Let's get creative with food!

Learning Outcome

Accurately use information about travel and vacations in social situations.

Ask your partner:

- Are you creative with food?
- How do you like to prepare food?
- What do you like to make?

Can Do Statements

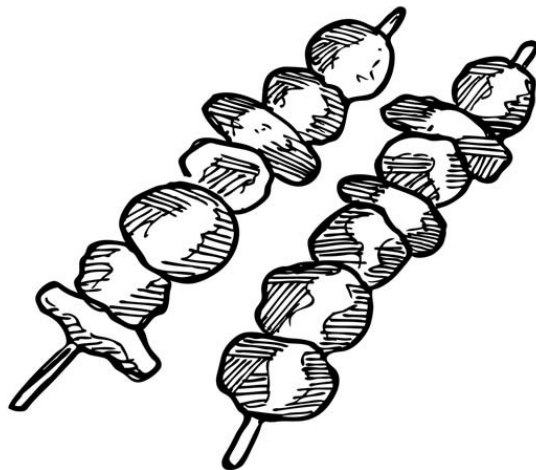

- I can talk about food.
- I can give simple instructions.
- I can name the ingredients when preparing a recipe.

Let's Explore!

Vanessa has a new cooking assignment! What is it?

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Helen: Listen up, everybody! I have an exciting homework task. It's called The Tasty Challenge. I'm giving you a list of ingredients. You have to make a unique dish. Give your recipe to your partner tomorrow morning.
- Tom: Look at my list: chicken, lemon juice, peanut butter and olive oil.
- Vanessa: That's easy! You can make satay chicken sticks. Mix a little lemon juice with the chicken, cook it on a barbecue, and prepare some peanut sauce.
- Tom: Thanks! What's on your list?
- Vanessa: Salmon, mozzarella cheese and pasta.
- Tom: You can make salmon macaroni and cheese. Just boil some water to cook the pasta, grate the cheese and add some salmon.
- Vanessa: My Aunt Nelly is going to like this assignment!

Let's Practice!

Learning Points

Quantifiers with Count and Non-Count Nouns

Count nouns are things we can count.

- They can be singular or plural (a lemon, two sticks).
- You can use some and any with count nouns.

Example: some chicken sticks

- You can also use a few and many.

Example: many lemons

Non-count nouns are things that we cannot divide into separate things. They are materials, substances or amounts.

- They are usually considered singular. You do not put an s at the end.

Example: This olive oil is very good.

- You can use some and any with non-count nouns.

Example: some lemon juice

- We can use a little and much with non-count nouns.

Example: a little lemon juice

Examples:

- Tony: Do you want to make some chicken sticks?

Amy: Sure do we need much lemon juice?

Tony: Just a little.

Amy: How many chicken sticks are you making?

Tony: Not too many, only a few.
